ODD BITS.

Bububs are native of Java.
It is a fact that a certain bird picks the teeth of the crocodile.

New Jersey leads the middle Atlantic states in the value of its fisheries.

Mount Wellington, near Hobart, Tasmania, is noted for an eucalyptus gum tree, 330 feet high and eighty-four feet in girth at its base.

Several species of tsetse flies, insects which today carry the germs of the African sleeping sickness, existed in what is now Colorado more than a million years ago.

Vegetable oils can be converted into gaseous and liquid hydrocarbons by subjecting the former to catalytic processes. This forms a good motor fuel with a very agreeable odor.

Measurements of 30,301 Swiss army recruits indicates that men from the lowlands are taller than those from the mountains, height varying nearly two-tenths of an inch, according to geographical altitude.

much success on the concert stage in Energy set free by the transmutation of hydrogen atoms contained in a tumblerful of water would be sufficient to drive the most powerful steamship back, scientists say.

GRIM REAPER

James Cook McClurkin

James Cook McClurkin, for many years a well known farmer living southwest of this city, died at midnight last night at the home of his son, John Howe McClurkin, at Winchester, Ky.

The body will arrive here tomorrow morning at 1:32 o'clock over the Southern and will be taken to the Radcliff-Colvin morgue to remain until the time of the funeral at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the United Presbyterian church. The funeral service will be conducted by Rev. J. P.
Nesbit, D. D., pastor, and burial will be in the Archer cemetery.

Surviving are the son, John H. Mc-Clurkin, of Winchester, Ky., and two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Bahrenberg, of Cleveland, O., and Mrs. Rose Beatty, of Cincinnati; two brothers, Robert McClurkin, of Willows, Cal., and Dr.
John C. McClurkin, of Evansville, and one sister, Mrs. Mary A. Woods, of Turkey Hill farm, southwest of this city; several grandchildren also survive. The children were all at the bedside of their father at Winchester when he passed away.

James Cook McClurkin was born in Union county, Indiana, July 6, 1834.
From there the family moved to Preble county, O., and lived there ten years, coming to Gibson county in October of 1850.

James McClurkin during the Civil war served in Company F, 3rd Indiana volunteer infantry. After the war he returned to this county. In January, 1871, he was married in Indiana to Amanda Howe, who died in 1885.

Mr. McClurkin was a faithful member of the United Presbyterian church of this city. The McClurkin home will be long remembered by those privileged to visit there for its happy, kindly home life and the hospitality of the decedent and his estimable wife.

It was the custom of the McClurkin family to meet in reunion here each Memorial day. On that occasion last year James C. McClurkin suffered a sudden illness two days before Memorial day and was taken to the Methodist hospital here, where for a time he seemed near death. He rallied and was able to be taken to the cemetery for the decoration service.

When he passed away last night it was in the midst of his family, loved and honored by those who had been dear to his heart.
